We could start the lesson listening (and singing with), the video, then discuss a list of interjection of ours. Then I write all interjections in word-of-word cards and place inside a bag decorated with exclamation points! Each student then would reach the front of the room, draw and interjection of the bag, and For us what this interjection would seem and would sound. As an extension for this activity, I would have the students use to use Interjections in a creative writing exercise. Students would work in groups of 2 and chose 1 interjection from our Brainstorm list. They then would write a scenario from when this interjection would probably be used (that is, the scenario would be about a visit to the medical consultancy for an annual verification and photos.) I I would make the students acting on their nap, using interjection. Major Panter Plate) and sustain the board with interjection whenever they want the public to interrupt!
